

SUMMARIES

I.B. Bovina. Theory of social representations: History and the actual development

The main propositions of the theory of social representations, its intellectual sources and development are discussed in the article. The special attention is paid to the discussion of the different approaches to the social representations analysis.

Key words: social and collective representations, structure of social thinking, structure and dynamics of social representations, functions of social representations, themata.

G.L. Voronin. One more time about “clusters on factors”

The paper deals with respondents' typologization in the analysis of sociological data. The presented algorithm for extraction the type of respondent relies on primary factor and subsequent cluster analysis of data. Computations are made with statistical package IBM SPSS Statistics 18.

Key words: factor analysis with principal components factors' extraction, analysis of correlations, k-means cluster analysis, reliability analysis.

A.V. Shevchuk. The limits of autonomy: A phenomenon of “dependent” self employment

The article deals with workers on the border between self-employment and employment. Continuous work only for one company creates various forms of economic, organizational and social dependency of self-employed. IT-technologies have an ambiguous impact on work autonomy. Social security issues are discussed.

Key words: work autonomy, dependent self-employment, telework, social security.

G.A. Cherednichenko. Employment of the youth and educational and professional trajectories

On the base of the state statistics the dynamic and structural transformations of youth employment in the years of reforms are shown that greatly changed the general formation framework of its educational and professional trajectories. A number of issues is considered: dynamic changes in economic activity, employment; vectors of restructuring of branch employment; changes in branch employment of youth compared with the entire employed population; the influence of educational composition of individual age groups on the structure of professional-qualification employment and a level of unemployment; spreading of non-standard youth employment.

Key words: employment and unemployment of youth, restructuring of branch employment, differences between branch and professional-qualification employment, age groups of youth, educational and professional trajectories of youth.

E.Yu. Rozdestvenskaya. Fatherhood: A liberal trend from “father” to “daddy”?

The article deals with the social phenomenon of fatherhood from the perspective of trends in the European debate about the role of the father in the family and empirical studies of fatherhood. The author chooses the German cultural-historical context as the closest to Russian (experienced era of totalitarianism, the prevalence of the phenomenon of absent fathers, partly socialist heritage). Both at the level of paradigms and at the level of empirical representative data, qualitative typologies also reveals a shift in the structure of traditional fatherhood in the direction of liberalization, greater involvement in the everyday practices of relationships with children. The author believes that just «new» liberalized fatherhood is potentially a field of practices, opposing the ideology of hegemonic masculinity as the scope of not only the authority and responsibility, but heterosociality, out of hierarchy, with empathy, play, emotions.

Key words: a role of the father in the family, fathering practices, the «new fatherhood», differentiation of the father’s model, social engagement of fatherhood, the liberalization of fatherhood.

I.V. Zabaev. Contemporary pentecostal economic ethic: critical analysis of the proceedings by D. Martin

The paper is devoted to one of the rapidly developing contemporary Christian denominations – Pentecostal church. It deals with issues of pentecostal ethic and social organization impact on its adherents well-being. Main hypotheses about scale, direction and specificity of this impact are discussed. The proceedings by British sociologist D. Martin are the subject of main attention.

Key words: pentecostalism, sociology of religion, religion and globalization, economic ethic, D. Martin, M. Weber, P. Berger.

R.N. Abramov. The academic autonomy on the service of intellectuals

This article is devoted to a role of the academic autonomy in a dominating position of intellectuals in the public sphere. The academic autonomy is a resource of legitimization the power and authority of intellectuals. Also intellectuals use the academic autonomy for protection of their social positions. In Russia transformation of the academic autonomy is connected with change of the position of intellectuals. Article represents the theoretical review based on attraction of a wide range russian and the foreign sources.

Key words: intellectuals, academic autonomy, public sphere, experts, university.